Warlords' Widows Wander Aimlessly Throughout Europe

LONDON—The widows, mistresses and daughters of Europe's top war criminals wander aimlessly today through the countries where once they were queens.

Most of them have nothing left but their infamous names.

A United Press survey of the continent showed that most of yesterday's fascist "royalty" have lost their homes, jewels, furs and servants they once enjoyed. Nor has time been kind to their charms and beauty.

A notable exception is Edda Ciano daughter of slain dictator Benito Mussolini and widow of executed Count Galeazzo Ciano.

The resourceful Edda, who made a lot of money by peddling her husband's memoirs, still lives in her accustomed high style, travels widely within Italy, and has many wealthy friends.

Mrs. Pierre Laval, widow of the French collaborationist, is also well fixed financially. But she is ridden by hate for the France that ordered a firing squad to "murder" her husband, and obsessed by the dream that she may someday clear his name of the stain of war guilt.

She lives surrounded by pictures of her husband, whether at home in her chateau at Chateldon or in the Paris apartment of her wealthy daughter-in-law, Countess Jose de Chambrum.

Kansan Elected Constable Through 'Joke' of Friend

KANSAS CITY, KAN.—Harry O. Tinklepaugh made probably the shortest "acceptance" speech on record.

Tinklepaugh went to vote. Remy Edwards, long-time friend, told him he promised to vote for him for constable.

Tinklepaugh said: "fine."

Edwards did some quick campaigning. He lined up four votes for his friend. Tinklepaugh thought no more of the "joke."

When the counting board finished its work, it certified Tinklepaugh as constable on the basis of this four write-in votes.

There were no candidates on the ticket for the no-fee-no-office job. So there were 61 write-ins. And Tinglepaugh's four votes topped the field.

For the surprised Tinklepaugh, there was some satisfaction.

"Now I can put a red light and siren on my car," he grinned.

Average Man Works Less, Gets More Wages for It

LONDON—A boilermaker in Kansas City smacks home a half-dozen rivets in two minutes. It earns him a loaf of bread.

The black-haired little Italian who comes around to mend the furnace in a Rome apartment works nearly half an hour for his loaf. In London, where government subsidies pay a large part of bread cost, the boiler maker has to work twice as long for a loaf as his Kansas City counterpart.

The average American works fewer hours and gets a whale of a lot more for his labor than most of the people he's helping in Europe.

To find the facts about the cost of living in the western world, research workers in 21 major cities, including Washington and Kansas City, investigated living conditions of typical families.

For comparative purposes, each selected a bookkeeper, a ditchdigger and a boilermaker, all married and the fathers of two children. The cost of living was translated into minutes and hours of work needed to obtain life's necessities.

The researchers found that earning powers in terms of groceries approaches United States standards in Oslo, Copenhagen and Stockholm—but other ordinary items, especially clothes, are considerably higher.

27 People Required To Wake Sleeping Boy

BROOKLYN.—It took 27 persons, including 10 policemen, to waken 12-year-old Louis Gossman by taking turns banging on his bedroom door at 1370 42nd street, Brooklyn. The siege of the modern Rip Van Winkle began at 7:15 a.m. and ended nearly an hour later.

At 6 a.m his mother, Mrs. Gussie Grossman served breakfast to her husband, William, 50, a soft drink dealer, and their elder son, Lawrence, 19. With the pair packed off to work, she caught a little more sleep and got up at 7. Then she called to Louis to get up for school. He mumbled something and she went out, did a little shopping, came back and found Louis' door locked and unopenable.

She knocked. No answer. She banged on the door. She screamed. No answer. Neighbors began to come in. They too yelled and knocked. At length seventeen women were getting hysterical when two radio cars and a police emergency squad, mustering 17 policemen, arrived.

They were about to break the door when Louis opened it. He was well, but yawning.

No Crystal Ball Needed To Tell Needs of Soil Tests Will Give Farmer Answer to Question

You don't need a crystal ball to tell you whether your soil needs lime.

A soil test will give you the yes or no answer. Where a deficiency exists, a test will indicate how much lime your soil needs. County agricultural agents, vocational agricultural teachers or agronomists at state colleges and experiment stations are glad to cooperate in making such tests.

Testing is always the safest course in applying lime. Some soils have plenty of lime. Adding more might be harmful rather than helpful to crop production.

To soils that need it, lime is the keystone of any well-planned soil building program. Lime adds needed calcium. Lime boosts the efficiency of fertilizers. It neutralizes acid soils and makes possible the growth of sweet clover and alfalfa. These deep-rooted legumes add precious organic matter to the soil.

But lime by itself cannot do the whole soil building job. It has to be supported by the generous use of phosphate and potash fertilizers, by plowing under deep-rooted legumes, by the return to the soil of all possible animal manure and crop residues.

Plowing Under Organic Matter Aids Oxidization

Plowing under some organic matter in the field or garden is a good way of disposing of crop residues because the microbes "burn" it, causing it to oxidize.

They do this slowly, yet the process of microbal combustion of such materials may have disastrous effects on a crop planted soon after plowing, in which case it is said the crop was "burned out."

Microbes need more than ordinary "go" foods. They need the energy foods, too, just as human beings do. They demand that the nitrogen be given them in the complete proteins or the more complex compounds of this element as humans do; nevertheless, they are just as exacting in their needs for nitrogen, at least, in its simpler forms.

Dr. William A. Albrecht, chairman of the department of soils, University of Missouri college of agriculture, in discussing how soil microbes get their food, points out that they get it before growing crops get theirs.

$732 Turkey

Elwood Swanson of Turlock, California., with his grand champion turkeys at the Far West turkey show. The 24-lb. hen on the left was grand champion and sold for $30.50 a pound. The 41-lb. tom on the right was reserve grand champion and sold for $10.75 a pound. The birds were finished on a grain and mash ration to which pelletized milk product was added.

Tillage May Be Used in Controlling Grasshoppers

Farmers can use tillage as an aid in controlling such troublesome insects as grasshoppers, crickets and wheatstem sawfly, according to Dr. J. A. Munro, entomologist of the NDAC agricultural experiment station.

The eggs of grasshoppers and crickets are laid during late summer and remain in the soil until spring when they hatch and the insects emerge.

Worrying Found to Be Indicator of Normalcy

EVANSTON, ILL.— Don't fret about being worried, because if you didn't worry you'd really have something to worry about! That's the advice of a Northwestern university psychologist.

Said Associate Prof. Irwin A. Berg: "We think of work and how unhappy we are, but have you ever thought that if we lacked such concern, houses probably would burn down because we failed to extinguish the gas or a smouldering cigaret butt, bills probably wouldn't be paid, and we wouldn't even ask for a raise in pay because we weren't worried about the cost of living? Many things that should get done would not be accomplished without constructive worry."

The core of Professor Berg's analysis of worry is that while it hinders us, when carried to extremes, it also helps us physically, mentally and socially. Sincere worry, not just fretting and stewing, assists a person in achieving purposeful activity, he believes.

"A better name for constructive worry is 'concern,'" explained Professor Berg. "It serves as a safety valve. It is a sort of protection, an insurance policy that certain things will be done."

Emphasizing that worry is a normal reaction which requires learning and experience to control, the psychologist said: "We learn to worry about other things and not about others. It's bad for a person not to worry at all—that is, to insulate himself from problems—as it is to worry so much that that's all he does."

Fingerprint of Lincoln Reported Found on Note

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The Illinois state historical library has what it believes is a fingerprint of Abraham Lincoln.

The print, made in ink, was found, on a brief note written by Lincoln shortly before the end of the Civil War. The note was bought by the library from a New York autograph dealer.

Jay Monaghan, state historian, feels sure the print is that of Lincoln. But there is no way to check it, since no one has a Lincoln fingerprint known to be authentic.

The note was written in ink on a small piece of paper, about 2½ by 4 inches. It said:

"Let this man be discharged. A. Lincoln, Feb. 17, 1865."

What the note referred to is not known, but Mr. Monaghan assumed that it had to do with the granting of a pardon.
